

DISCLOSURE OF AFFILIATIONS AND POTENTIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

To be completed by each resource person

Every resource person within the meaning of the CQDPCM's Code of Ethics for CPD, must disclose their affiliations over the past two years, that is, any relationship with a for-profit or non-profit organization, whether or not it is related to the theme of the training activity. These affiliations must make it possible to identify the views or actual or potential conflicts of interest liable to influence the content of the presentation.

If necessary, mitigation strategies must be proposed to guarantee that the presentation will be objective and impartial. Lastly, whether affiliations exist or not, a disclosure must be made to the participants at the start of the activity.

See the Guide des meilleures pratiques sur la gestion des biais et des conflits d'intérêts dans les activités de DPC du CQDPCM (French only).

I propose the following mitigation strategies: _____

Examples of mitigation strategies:

- Choosing to present the evidence or best data available on the subject and not only expert recommendations.
- Having a third party examine the content (e.g., asking a peer to review the presentation before the activity, in the case of a speaker).

As a speaker, I undertake to:

1. design my conference in accordance with the learning objectives provided and not use any teaching materials from sponsor. For the approved programs (CEM) by FMOQ, use the teaching materials without any modifications;
2. inform the audience, at the time of my presentation or during the question period, of any off-label information regarding the product monograph and of the fact that this is an opinion built on evidence-based medicine or on my personal clinical experience.
